Ironhide Construction provided architectural metal panels for the fascades of the multi-retail building, which would be home to a new Starbucks and Buffalo Wild Wings in Fremont, Nebraska.

Three different styles of architectural panels were installed both horizontally and vertically. Buffalo Wild Wings required a special order color of yellow, creating a longer lead time to order the material and precision handling and installation of the limited supply of special order panels.

Ironhide Construction was a subcontractor to NGC Group, which planned to turn over the completed structure to the companies for interior completion in Feb 2017.
